

THE COLLABORATION CONFERENCE

Greg Ranstrom

Wednesday, June 24, 2009

What if you could cause your entire leadership population to streamline existing interactions and plan new, productive interactions to accelerate business results?

This is the goal of The Collaboration Conference. We bring large groups of employees together and create an opportunity for everyone to prioritize and improve relationships that produce business value.

The questions are simple: "Who needs to interact with whom in order to create maximum value for the organization?" and "How can the quality of those interactions be improved?"

The answers to these simple, powerful questions can only be discovered through conversations among the people involved. We could make things more complicated with models and theories, but getting results comes back to productive relationships among the people doing the work.

That's why we designed The Collaboration Conference--to cause everybody to stop and consider who they need to collaborate with and how they can improve the quality of their collaborations.

In less than half of a day, your employees can shift and improve their interactions in order to accelerate business results.

We apply useful large group conference techniques to structure the conversations. Two engaging activities help prepare participants for the work of The Collaboration conference. Maximize® is our fast-paced, experiential activity that demonstrates power of moving beyond silos and turf to productive collaboration. And our Collaboration Surveys apply social network analysis to key business processes. Either or both of these activities set the framework for prioritizing and improving collaboration throughout your organization.

"In less than half of a day your employees can shift and improve their interactions in order to accelerate business results."

The Collaboration Conference can be followed with more intensive workshops to address dysfunctional collaboration, but most organizations simply require the time and intention provided by The Collaboration Conference to ensure high quality collaboration and high quality results.

Call now to schedule The Collaboration Conference for your next leadership gathering..

Outside Insights 63930 W Quail Haven Drive Bend, OR 97701
www.outsideinsights.com | info@outsideinsights.com | (888) 383-2090